

Effective information flow for the optimal performance of your business.

Still searching, or already at work?

Optimize your content flow and automate your information processes.

Our Coextant solution is powerful, advanced, stable and running without any problems. Content management work we would normally expect is simply no longer there.

Edda Walraf, Head of Marketing
Rieter Textile Division

Just as cash flow measures business strength based on the ability to efficiently leverage financial resources, content flow measures business strength based on the ability to efficiently leverage information resources.

Automating the movement of information from A to B is only part of achieving healthy content flow. More important is the ability to transform it into easily-consumable content that increases workforce effectiveness and performance.

The bulk of today's business information is buried in documentation and various other unstructured sources. It is authored and revised thousands of times daily. Extracting, classifying and seamlessly integrating this massive volume of information into various applications and mediums is a major challenge on its own. Making it personalizable, content-sensitive and task/user-optimized often seems impossible.

We help you turn these and other content challenges into successful realities.

By optimizing your content flow.
By automating your information processes.
By extending your ability to put usable knowledge on tap.

Recognized businesses around the world have already improved their business performance with content flow solutions from Coextant.
